Artist statement: "I believe to be a happy whole person we need to imagine and experience wildness, beauty, peace, and "otherness." Art lets us do that. It takes us someplace else, some when else. It enriches our lives, broadens our vision and connects us to the universe. It may be the vision that helps us ultimately save our planet!

About the artist

Pat Banks works primarily in watercolor and acrylic. Her work is inspired by the natural beauty of the forest, meadow, garden and river. She has developed her style and vision over decades of experimentation, exploration and study. She has become an activist and advocate for the environment and Kentucky River in particular. She has been a visiting artist to Ecuador, Japan and France. Her work is available in select regional and national venues. Her prints are distributed internationally. Her work is included in several publications, collections and children's books. She works from her Madison County, studio/home that she and her husband built to raise their two beautiful sons, gardens and now grandchild.
